ESBG is closer to IEI then IEF as it holds 5 year duration bonds

Thanks. Very useful list.

RSSX's proportion of gold to Bitcoin is supposed to be inverse to their volatilities. Right now, my understanding is that it's about a 4:1 ratio, not 3:1. Return Stacked mentioned it in one of their videos.

Should $ALLW be on there? Think it's something like 1.6x. Not sure about it's breakdown, just recall seeing it pop up here a couple times.

Man, you are on it! MATE was just announced today and there it is. Thank you for this. I've also been combing sites for the past couple of years trying to find newer RS and MF ETFs. You'd think the databases would do a better job, but they don't, although I heard Morningstar is creating new categories to better handle alternative funds. Still, I suspect your lists will be the gold standard for a few years. Thank you!

I requested the mods to pin my post... it would help if you can ping them too. They refuse to respond to me.

Cambria Endowment Style ETF ENDW

Not sure if it will qualify but based on prospectus should be more than 100% exposure

"Under normal market conditions, the Fund expects to have notional exposure of between 100% and 150% of its total assets in futures contracts on U.S. Treasury instruments and in Underlying ETFs that provide exposure to various investment asset classes (e.g., equities, fixed income, real estate, commodities, and currencies) and factors (e.g., value, momentum, and trend investing)."

Awesome list!

Only improvement would maybe be moving rsby and rssi to the managed futures section?

RSBA is actually more like 25% UTWO, 25% UFIV, 25% UTEN, 25% UTHY, 100% MARB

Treasury component of RSSB is the same.

Fairly certain the bond component of SPLS is not 100% MINT. It appears it also holds other PIMCO bond ETFs like PYLD, etc.

Not sure GOLY should have CTA in it? I think it's just a broad commodity basket so maybe COM instead?

Quibbles: RSSB is purely Treasuries, GOVT or IEF would be the equivalent. Same for RSBA.

RSBT/RSBY are only 50 AGG - the bond futures to get the bonds up to 100 will always be laddered Treasuries as a practical matter so 50 AGG/50 GOVT is more accurate.

All the NTS_ are purely Treasuries.

ALLW is a lot more complex, it favors emerging equities and developed government (non-Japanese) bonds a fair bit, along with having a discreet excess exposure to gold along with what it already gets from the commodity basket. It's half gold, half DBC last I looked. They adjust based on correlations evolving, which is why those tilts are what they are.

For the MF exposures you may want to keep track of the target volatility. RSST is 12-13% vol (as it seeks to replicate SocGen trend) but others will differ, which effectively changes how much "leverage" you're getting. The trend program in BLNDX, for example, is often sub 10.

Unfortunately some strategies are still mutual fund only - some just aren't as friendly for the ETF wrapper (long-short like QLEIX), can't deal with less liquid markets (RDMIX), or otherwise have no equivalent strategies (bond credit-hunting alongside EAFE with PSKIX)...

Missing: GDMN, YGLD, the four AQR fusion funds

Your requirements/qualifications are arbitrary IMO
